Ninthly as I must take heed of pampering my body to much and ought to take some ordinary corporall punishment of fasting, discipline, hearecloth, or the like: So on the other side, I must haue care of my health, and so temper all my spirituall exercises and bodily afflictions, with discretion, that I may continue in them still, & not make my selfe vnable to perseuer long by the vndiscreet greedines of a short time. and to vse discretiō these observations will availe.

First before God to thinke whether doing this or that, I may be able to continew my vndertaken course in Gods seruice, my body, force, health, and other cares and combers or busineses considered.

Secondly to aske counsaile of spirituall men long practised in spirituall

But if soules health must be preferred before the body.

But abilitie of continuance is not to be regarded or considered.
